States may tinker with Medicaid

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton opened the door Monday for states to try new ways to provide health coverage for the uninsured and take care of nursing home patients.

In effect, he invited the nation's 50 governors to make health-care reform their social science fair project.

After meeting with the governors for more than two hours at the White House, Clinton ordered his administration to dismantle bureaucratic obstacles that keep states from getting a decision on whether they can redesign their Medicaid programs.

"The health-care problems of this country can only be met if we have a good partnership," Clinton said. He also stressed the need for states to join the federal government in preventive health programs, such as childhood vaccinations.

Medicaid is a federal-state program that provides health coverage for families on welfare and pays nursing home bills for lower-income elderly people. Its fast-growing cost is a major concern for the president and the governors alike.

If Clinton's order works as intended, half-dozen states could launch their own health-care reform programs as early as this year. Some projects may also require congressional approval.

In addition, many states want to experiment with alternatives to nursing homes, such as home care or community-based centers.

"A lot of the states have been in a holding pattern," said Dick Merritt, head of the Intergovernmental Health Policy Project at George Washington University in Washington. "This is a signal that (Clinton) wants state experiments to move forward."

Colorado Democratic Gov. Roy Romo, chairman of the National Governors' Association, said he sees the health-care reform partnership working like this: The federal government would set national standards and arrange financing, and the states would figure out how to deliver services.

Clinton's package, Romo said, will be "a framework that lets states retain flexibility." It may mean that most Californians would some day get their care from health maintenance organizations but that in Wyoming independent doctors would remain the norm.

Clinton's decision could be felt quickly in several states that are pushing forward on health-care reform.

February test

Boise resident Ed Schrock and some area waterfowl quietly share the waters as he tests his fly-fishing skills at Clear Lake near Buhl. He made the drive from Boise Monday because most fishing locations are closed this time of year, he said.

Judge relents, lets public hear Fino jury questioning

Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — A judge barred the public from the questioning of prospective jurors in the Jerry Fino murder trial Monday, then reopened the proceedings after objections from the media.

But 5th District Judge George Granata Jr. asked the Mini-Cassia News Service and The News Journal of Rupert not to report specific questions asked of jurors or their answers until a jury is seated, and said he'd hold a hearing if reporters want to print those accounts.

Fino, an 18-year-old Rupert resident, is charged with the April 13, 1992, first-degree murder of Rupert pawnbroker Randy Walker.

His trial began Monday.

It's unusual for a judge to close trials involving adults, or to attempt to restrict reporting of those proceedings. Both the U.S. and Idaho constitutions guarantee a public trial.

But Fino's lawyer, Twin Falls attorney Randy Stoker, asked Granata to close the questioning of jurors, and Granata agreed.

"They will be asked a lot of personal questions," he said.

Douglas S. Jones, publisher and editor of The News Journal, objected.

The right of the press and the public to attend judicial proceedings is guaranteed by the First and the 14th Amendments to the United States Constitution, and by sections 9 and 18 of Article I of the Idaho Constitution," he said.

Jones said while it's unlikely that questions to the jurors or their responses would be considered newsworthy, he could not predict whether they might result in a published story.

Granata said if the newspaper considered the specific nature of the interviews to be newsworthy, and wanted to publish such stories before a jury was seated, there would be a hearing.

Stoker had objected to the questioning of the jurors being open because he feared news-reports of the questions would "contaminate" the pool of prospective jurors.

The jury will eventually consist of 12 people and two alternates who were originally part of a 360-member randomly selected pool of voters, and licensed drivers in Minidoka County, according to Earlene Hatmaker, deputy court clerk.

Subtracting those who have moved out of the county, those with medical problems and those who are over 70 and do not wish to serve on a jury narrowed the pool to 140 on Monday, Hatmaker said.

The remaining prospective ju-

MVRMC eyes new doctors' office complex

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News Staff

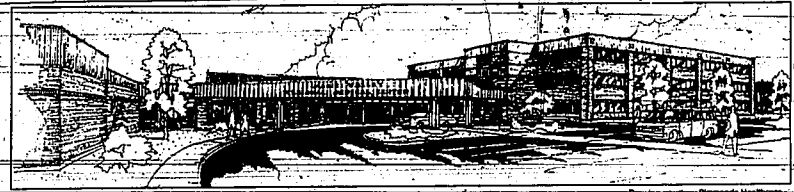

TWIN FALLS — Responding to requests by about 25 doctors, Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is considering building a new doctors' office complex.

The hospital's board of directors has hired Simmons Healthcare for $14,000 a month for the next two or three months to make preliminary drawings of the building and determine from doctors whether it is feasible.

"If the project isn't good for the community, the hospital and the physicians, it won't be done," Michael Carlson of Simmons said.

Hospital spokeswoman Sue Summers said the community has made bringing new doctors to the area its highest priority.

"To do that you have to provide space for them," she said.

Almost two and one-half years ago, the hospital bought the 27,000-square-foot Doctor's Park, located one block northeast of the hospital, for $2.25 million.

Carlson and Paul Aigner, another Simmons employee, were in town Monday to show board members preliminary drawings of a proposed three-story office complex with a 12,000-square-foot same-day surgery center on the first floor.

Their drawings show the new building with almost 45,000 total square feet, connected by a corridor to the east side of the

McDevitt assumes top spot on Gem high court

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court took up its business with a new chief justice on Monday but there will be no change in the court's drive toward modernization.

Justice Charles McDevitt now is Chief Justice Charles McDevitt. He replaced Justice Charles McDevitt, who retired after 21 years on the high court.

The Idaho Judicial Council, which McDevitt now heads, will interview candidates to replace Bakes on Feb. 23.

McDevitt is the fourth chief justice chosen through a vote of the court's four other members. Gov. Cecil Andrus appointed him to the bench in 1989 after the death of former Chief Justice Allan Shepard, and he was elected to a new six-year term last year.

McDevitt, who turned 61 on Jan. 5, presides over a fairly new court.

Only 16-year veteran Stephen Basline has more than five years' experience. Byron Johnson was appointed in 1988 and Linda Copple Trout only last fall.

McDevitt said the turnover has produced a good climate for change.

"We're going to try to open the court more, make it more accessible. It's a combination of the personalities that are now here," he said in an interview before taking on the new job.

"We want to let the public have a better understanding of what goes on here. We will have members of the court more publicly involved as well," he said. "It's good for the court to get out and see people and talk to people."

Marines leave, wondering who will care for Somalis

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — It would be a bitter-sweet flight home, trying to sort out a jumble of memories and feelings.

As 473 U.S. Marines headed home to their loved ones Monday, they left Somalia with mixed emotions. Sure, it was time to go. The brass said they were no longer needed.

But who would care for the Somalis, they were sent here to help?

The Army soldiers who replaced them, they hoped.

For some, what they saw was a cultural shock just as piercing as a bullet.

The Marines who departed Monday were not the combat troops that breathed excitement and adventure, but the behind-the-scenes logisticians — engineers, heavy equipment operators, truck drivers and electricians.

They are rarely in the headlines. Just the same, their commander said they were visible to the Somalis.

Most were happy to be going. But there was no backslapping. No high fives. Their joy was subdued. A few wanted to stay.

All of them, like Lance Col. William Case, 20, of St. Martinsville, La., a heavy equipment operator, learned more than they could in a semester in any school.

They saw the effects of famine, disease, civil war and lawlessness that

'92 construction spending hit 6-year high

Construction spending

Billions of dollars, seasonally adjusted

Source: U.S. Dept. of Commerce

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending rose 6.2 percent in 1992, the largest increase in three years, the government said Monday.

But it remained unchanged in December after three monthly increases, and the October and November increases were revised downward substantially.

Most of the annual increase was in the single-family home category as overbuilding and high-vacancy rates continued to curb apartment and private, non-residential spending.

Single-family housing remains the only source of construction sector strength, economists at Merrill Lynch & Co. in New York said.

The Commerce Department reported that residential, non-residential and government outlays totaled $425.8 billion, up from $401 billion in 1991 and the highest since they totaled $446.4 billion in 1990.

It was the biggest annual gain since an 8 percent advance in 1986.

In December, spending was unchanged at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $434.4 billion.

The report also put November's spending increase at just 0.9 percent, rather than the 2.1 percent original estimate, and October's rise at 0.3 percent, instead of 1 percent.

The Merrill Lynch economists said the revisions "imply a significant downward revision to the construction components" of the gross domestic product.

In its initial estimate last week, the Commerce Department said spending on residential buildings jumped 29.1 percent at an annual rate during the October-December quarter, while outlays for non-residential structures rose 4.5 percent.

Overall residential construction — both single- and multi-family homes — rose 16 percent in 1992, to $183 billion, including a 1.8 percent advance in December.

But the increase was entirely in single-family spending, which surged by 22.6 percent, to $117 billion. Apartment outlays fell 14.3 percent, to $13 billion.

The Merrill Lynch economists noted that mortgage applications have risen in recent weeks and said residential spending should make further significant gains.

"But commercial construction is likely to remain moribund," they added.

In fact, spending on non-residential projects, such as factories and office buildings, slumped 12.8 percent last year, to $85.4 billion, including a 5.2 percent drop in December. Many of the non-residential components were overbuilt in recent years and remain vacant and unused.

Spending for hotels and motels plunged 45.8 percent last year. Outlays were down 26.5 percent for office buildings, 25.3 percent for factories and 8.4 percent for other commercial, the category that includes shopping centers.

Planned Parenthood helps military with abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — With virtually no abortion experience in recent years, the Pentagon's medical officers are consulting Planned Parenthood before allowing abortion at military hospitals once again.

The Defense Department requested the family planning organization's medical guidelines for abortion, including patient care before and after the procedure, according to Sally Patterson, of Planned Parenthood Federation of America's said.

Susan Hansen, a Defense Department public affairs officer, said it would be logical for military medical officers to seek guidance from Planned Parenthood, but that she had no information on any contact between the two. With an allergy uncommon in large bureaucracies, the Pentagon is moving quickly to implement President Clinton's Jan. 22 order reversing a five-year ban on abortion at military medical hospitals.

Women would have to pay for the abortions themselves. Federal funding of abortions is barred by U.S. law except in cases where a woman's life is endangered.

Secretary orders job freeze at Agriculture

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In one of his first actions, Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy imposed a department-wide job freeze and announced he will cut the department's large Washington bureaucracy before he approves a proposed reduction in field offices.

The job freeze, which was not publicly announced, came on Espy's first day in office, Jan. 22, and was coupled with his promise to review a Bush administration plan to close more than 1,200 Agriculture offices outside Washington. Joel Berg, an Espy spokesman, said Friday that "it

Sen Danforth says he won't seek seat

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sen. John C. Danforth said Monday he will not seek re-election in 1994.

In a hastily called airport news conference, Danforth, R-Mo., said he has no immediate plans but that he wants to fulfill a commitment to the Episcopal Church. He said he and his family will return to St. Louis next year. "I would rather start a new phase of my life when I am 58 rather than 64," he said.

Danforth was first elected to the Senate in 1976. He was re-elected in 1982 and 1988.

Espy, making cuts in Washington and has pledged to "make an example here" before closing field offices, Berg said.

Agriculture is the fourth-largest federal department in terms of employees, with 128,324 workers nationally. It is also the fourth largest department in Washington with 13,655 employees in the metropolitan area.

"The grease and the lard is right here in Washington, D.C.," Sen.

Conrad Burns, R-Mont., a former agriculture newscaster, recently complained. His sentiment is shared by many lawmakers from rural states. "You've got over a thousand economists. You only need one," Burns said.

Espy, a former House member from Mississippi, agreed last week. "We need to show the country that we fully realize that the Washington operation of USDA is too large and doesn't adequately serve the needs of farmers and consumers," he said in an interview on the USDA radio program. "We need to correct that and correct that quickly."

The secretary's job freeze blocks all personnel actions "of any kind" in the department's field offices, at the GS-13 grade or higher, and in any office still supervised by Bush political appointees. A memo from Larry B. Slagle, Agriculture's director of personnel, said the freeze would last "for a brief interim period" and exceptions to the "temporary freeze" would have to be approved by the secretary's office.

Officials at the Office of Personnel Management said Friday that they knew of no other department that had imposed a similar job freeze since President Clinton took office. One Agriculture employee said that supervisors were describing the action as an effort to block Bush administration officials from "bureaucracy" or converting from political positions as appointees to full-time career government jobs.

Frederick Price, M.D.

"Did you hear recently about the disposable contact lens controversy? 'While some disposable lens users did have problems, it turns out that the lenses involved were being used longer than prescribed or were not being properly maintained. Maybe because a patient knows he'll be throwing a lens away, it's easier to be lax about cleaning procedures.

"As long as you carefully follow your dispenser's instructions, disposable lenses will serve you well."

Government advances on Khmer Rouge

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Government troops are advancing on the Khmer Rouge headquarters in their biggest and most coordinated offensive since U.N. peacekeepers arrived in Cambodia, U.N. officials said Monday.

Government soldiers were forcing an undetermined number of villagers and returned refugees to transport ammunition and attack the Khmer Rouge, said Eric Berman, spokesman for the U.N. Transitional Authority in Cambodia.

"They're within 20 kilometers (12 miles) of Pailin," Berman said, referring to the site of the Khmer Rouge headquarters. "I don't think, since UNTAC has been here, that there has been an offensive of this size."

Cambodia's four factions, including the Vietnam-installed government and Khmer Rouge, signed a peace accord in 1991 to end 13 years of war. The U.N. peacekeeping force began operations in mid-March and is trying to stabilize the country for elections in May.

Group says it's responsible for bombings

BOGOTA, Colombia — A group claiming to be an offshoot of Pablo Escobar said Monday that it was responsible for bombings near the residences of the drug baron's mother and two other relatives.

The group said the blasts in Medellin on Sunday were retaliation for a fatal bombing Saturday night that killed 21 people in Bogota, the capital. "We want to make Pablo Escobar feel the effects in his own flesh of his brand of terrorism," said a communiqué received Monday by The Associated Press. The communiqué was signed by a group calling itself PEPES, the Spanish acronym for "those persecuted by Pablo Escobar."

The group had not been heard from previously.

Young chess grandmaster beats Spassky

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Judith Polgar, the youngest chess grandmaster in history, beat former world champion Boris Spassky on Monday to take an early lead in their $200,000, 10-game exhibition match.

The 16-year-old Hungarian, the No. 1-ranked female player, showed why she is a potential contender for the overall world championship. She played white and used a Spanish opening.

Neither player lost a piece in the first 21 moves. But Polgar then attacked aggressively. Spassky, 40 years her senior, resigned on the 40th move.

Polgar's victory, following a draw in the first game Sunday, gave her a lead of 1.5 points to 0.5. Each victory is worth one point and each draw a half-point in the match, which continues Wednesday. The winner gets $120,000, the loser $80,000.

Crews search for train wreck victims

NAIROBI, Kenya — Search teams surveyed the banks of a swollen river and nearby hospitals Monday looking for passengers from a train wreck that killed at least 61 people and left 46 missing.

Jeremiah Musuva, managing director of Kenya Railways, said he was optimistic most of the missing survived the accident. Saturday night and left the scene during the confusion of rescue operations.

Musuva said 107 people — the driver, his assistant and 105 passengers — were in the engine and five coaches that plunged into the river when the train crossed onto a washed-out bridge. Eleven cars remained on the track.

He said two trains had crossed the bridge 15 minutes before the accident, which he attributed to a flash flood caused by unusually heavy rains.

Israel repatriates 100 deported Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will repatriate 100 of the deported Palestinians from Lebanon immediately and return the remainder within a year, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin announced Monday.

The deportations had prompted the U.N. to demand the exiles' immediate return and endangered the resumption of Middle East peace talks.

The Palestine Liberation Organization quickly rejected Israel's move. Yasser Abed-Rabbo, a PLO executive committee member, said from Tunisia that it was an attempt to circumvent the U.N. resolution demanding the return of the deportees to their homes.

Rabin said the arrangement was worked out in discussions with the United States and that the Clinton administration undertook to shield Israel from international sanctions and to work to renew the Middle East peace talks.

"It is a package deal," he told a news conference, adding that it would apply whether or not the deported Palestinians — who have been lying in makeshift camp in a no-man's land in southern Lebanon — accepted Israel's offer.

The compromise was approved unanimously at a special Cabinet meeting Monday night.

Rabin had repeatedly vowed that Israel would not back down, and he acknowledged Monday night that the decisions were "none too easy, and I won't try to present them as easy."

However, he told Israelis in a live broadcast, "we are presently in a confrontation in the international arena and it was very important to reach an understanding with the United States, and especially with the administration of President Clinton."

The compromise was apparently aimed at preventing U.N. steps to enforce a resolution demanding the deportees' return. Arab nations in particular have been furious at what they consider a double standard in the way U.N. resolutions pertaining to Iraq and Israel have been enforced.

The compromise would make it easier for the United States to block a U.N. Security Council resolution on enforcing the resolution. U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher said in New York that the United States and Israel have been engaged in "some very extensive consultations" on the deportations in recent days.

"Both President Clinton and I feel that these discussions have been positive and productive and we are quite optimistic that they will open the way to a resolution of this issue and enable us to put the issue behind us," he said.

Jazz blow 20-point lead, Bulls win

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY—Michael Jordan scored 20 of his 37 points in a wild fourth quarter, rallying Chicago from a 20-point deficit to a 96-92 victory over Utah on Monday night.

Pro basketball

B.J. Armstrong had 20 points and Scottie Pippen added 17 as the Bulls ended a two-game losing streak. Horace Grant had 12 points to go with a game-high 19 rebounds. Had they lost, it would have been the Bulls' first three-game skid since the start of the 1990-91 season.

The Bulls' triumph overshadowed the performance of Utah's Karl Malone, who hit 14 of 18 shots and had 40 points and nine rebounds. Malone was named NBA player of the week earlier Monday for averaging 34.7 points and 15 rebounds in three games last week. John Stockton finished with 16 points and 13 assists.

Malone had 17 of his points in the third quarter, when the Jazz used a 19-7 run to post a 64-47 advantage with 4:36 left. A pair of free throws by Stockton lifted the Jazz to a 20-point lead, their largest.

Pippen's three-point play and Jordan's twisting jumper from the top of the key closed Chicago to 75-60 going into the final 12 minutes and set up Jordan's heroics.

The Bulls ended up outscoring Utah 36-17 in the fourth quarter.

A pair of 44-rebound buckets by Jordan trimmed the Utah lead to 10 points with 5:46 to play, and the Bulls scored 12 of the next 14—with Jordan lighting five straight baskets—to knot the contest at 87 with 2:16 remaining.

Armstrong's 3-pointer from the corner with 53 seconds to play gave Chicago the lead for good. Stockton's 3-pointer nine seconds later made it 93-92, but Jordan sank three foul shots down the stretch to preserve the win.

Rookie Alonzo Mourning had 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Hornets, and Kendall Gill also had 19. Ricky Pierce led Seattle with 23 points. Shawn Kemp had 17 points and 14 rebounds for the Sonics, his sixth straight double-double.

Bucks 116, Warriors 102

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Fred Roberts led a spurt to close the third quarter and Todd Day scored eight of his 23 in the final period Monday night as the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Golden State Warriors 116-102.

Len Mayberry added 17 for Milwaukee, including a pair of fourth-quarter 3-pointers. Golden State, losing its sixth straight road game, got 20 points from Tim Hardaway and 19 pieces from Chris Mullin and Chris Gatling.

The cold-shooting Mullin, who missed two last-second free throws in a 106-105 loss to the Los Angeles Clippers on Friday, made just 7 of 20 field goal attempts.

Bowen, at the half, hit the Warriors caught up late in the third quarter when Hardaway, who had nine points in the period, hit a jumper to tie the game at 87 with 2:22 left.

But following a brief altercation and a double technical foul on Golden State's Byron Houston and Roberts, the Bucks went on a 16-7 run to take an 11-point lead with a quarter to go.

Nets 115, Mavericks 96

DALLAS (AP)—Derrick Coleman scored 27 points, including nine in the pivotal third quarter, as the New Jersey Nets took a 115-96 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Monday.

Drazen Petrovic scored 21 points and Kenny Anderson added 20 as the Nets handed the Mavericks their seventh consecutive defeat. Rookie Sean Rooks scored 21 points for Dallas, which lost for the 22nd time in 23 games. Terry Davis added 16.

The Mavericks managed to stay within striking distance for the first 24 minutes, but their 26 turnovers and poor free-throw shooting allowed New Jersey to pull away in the second half.

Buffalo legislator dons bag for Assembly work

ALBANY, N.Y.—The deputy speaker of the New York State Assembly—he's from Buffalo—showed up for work Monday with a bag over his head.

The Assembly speaker—he's from New York City—paid off a bet with his Texas counterpart by taking the podium to open Monday's session sporting a cowboy hat and a Dallas Cowboy's sweatshirt.

The Buffalo Bills had lost another Super Bowl, their third in a row. This time it was a 52-17 drubbing Sunday by the Cowboys. "I had sort of been hoping that the speaker of the Texas Assembly would be dressed in red, white and blue with a Buffalo helmet today, but it didn't work out that way," New York Assembly Speaker Sam Waxman told his colleagues.

Deputy Speaker Arthur Livo, a Buffalo Democrat, sat silently in his Assembly chair. The brown paper bag over his head said it all: "Buffalo Bills fan. Can't talk." And on the back: "Buffalo Bills fan—went to Super Bowl."

Bowe accuses Lewis handlers of sidestepping fight setup

SCOTRUN, Pa.—Riddick Bowe wants to fight Lennox Lewis, but only on his terms. "I'll fight him if his people stop shuckin' and jivin'," Bowe said Monday. The former world heavyweight champion accused the Lewis camp of sidestepping the World Boxing Council championship recognition bestowed on the Briton after Bowe signed to fight Michael Dokes on Saturday night in Madison Square Garden. "Let him throw the belt in garbage," Bowe said. "I want to see the undisputed title by outpointing Evander Holyfield on Nov. 13, and who remains champion in the eyes of the International Boxing Federation and the World Boxing Association. The people most definitely consider me the champion."

Hoosiers on top; Knight may not care

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS—Indiana's harshest critic is its coach, to whom national rankings mean nothing.

The Hoosiers (19-2) benefited from Kansas' loss to Long Beach State and moved Monday into the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press college basketball poll for the first time in 10 years.

Kansas dropped to third, while Kentucky moved up two spots to second. Cincinnati, whose only loss was to Indiana, rose two spots to fourth.

Coach Bob Knight, who couldn't be reached for comment, said last week that a No. 1 ranking only offered a target to opponents.

Top 25 listing — A7

He said it's hard for him to judge how good Indiana really is.

"We have, on occasion, played really well," he told the Indianapolis News.

"It's probably difficult for me to objectively evaluate this team because I tend to be more negative than necessary, because I'm with it every day and I see everything that I think we lack," Knight said.

Indiana's only losses were by 5 points to Kansas and 3 points to Kentucky — games in which the Hoosiers missed 27 of 49 free throw attempts.

"But a brutal schedule in which Indiana has beaten seven other current Top 25 teams has the Hoosiers ready for a break this week.

Their next game is Saturday night at No. 9 Iowa, which lost to the Hoosiers by 8 points at Bloomington last month.

"I think our team is tired," Knight said on his weekly television show Sunday.

"We've been going at it pretty hard. I think now is a great time for us to be able to take a couple of days, sit back, relax and get away from it, and let our players prop their feet up, and their legs up, and get off them for a while. Then hopefully that will be of some help to us."

The Hoosiers (8-0 in the Big Ten) are off to their best conference start since 1976, the first of Knight's three NCAA titles, and the last time a national champion went unbeaten.

Indiana's rise to No. 1 this week made it the fifth team to occupy that position this season. Besides Kansas, which held the top ranking for two weeks, the others were Michigan, Duke and Kentucky.

The past two years, UNLV and then Duke were ranked No. 1 from start to finish.

Cowboy coach points to teamwork for win

Jimmy Johnson warns against 'slide' next season; Aikman discounts talk of dynasty

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES—Jimmy Johnson and Troy Aikman were late for the Super Bowl winner's session because they were caught in typical southern California rush-hour traffic.

Jerry Jones was late for the first day after news conference by an owner because he probably still was talking at the Rose Bowl. 14 hours after the Dallas Cowboys beat the Buffalo Bills 52-17 and capped a comeback that began after the Cowboys were 1-15 in 1989, Johnson's first year.

The questions were the usual. And they were contradictory.

Would the Cowboys, the youngest team in the league, be a dynasty? Or would they quickly self-destruct, as so many Super Bowl winners have.

"We're young, but the system has changed," Aikman said. "With free agency, teams may not stay together as easily."

The New York Giants and Washington Redskins, the other East Division teams to win Super Bowls during the NFL's nine-game winning streak, have gone 6-9, 8-8, 7-9 and 9-7 following their titles, Johnson said. The even before Sunday's victory, he was thinking about how to avoid a letdown next season.

Dallas owner: Millions spent for team was 'steal'

The Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif.—Critics said Jerry Jones paid $20 million too much when he bought the Dallas Cowboys for $140 million four years ago.

"It was a steal," Jones said Sunday after the Cowboys won their first Super Bowl in 15 years with a 52-17 rout of the Buffalo Bills. "What we need to do now is roll up our sleeves and hope we can become the first Dallas team to win back-to-back Super Bowls."

The Cowboys arrived back in Dallas of Monday missing six Pro Bowl members of their championship team. Fans wishing to get a glimpse of their heroes were out of Troy Aikman, who threw four touchdown passes and earned Super Bowl MVP honors, will be traveling to Hawaii along with running back Emmitt Smith, tight end Jay Novacek, center Mark Stepnoski, wide receiver Michael Irvin and guard Nate Newton.

"I expect there could be a ticker-tape parade in the future when we get everyone back," Jones said.

Coach Jimmy Johnson was expected to head to the Bahamas for a vacation after a stop in Dallas to feed his goldfish.

"They've been on a diet while I've been gone," Johnson said.

The Cowboys parted early into the morning after a victory in which the defense forced nine turnovers, turning two into touchdowns.

"It was a great comeback for the franchise," Jones said. "We started out 1-15 and then we made those two Super Bowls. We were doing it. I can't say enough for what Jimmy has done. He has given his heart and soul to us having a winning football team."

Winter adds to chills in 'frosty' Buffalo

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — How appropriate that Buffalo residents woke up to winter's worst chill this morning after their football team lost a record-third straight Super Bowl and lost it big time.

The city's mood Monday was frosty after the Buffalo Bills truly humiliated its performance against the Dallas Cowboys. "You just want to hide under the covers," said Joe Pace, a National Weather Service forecaster. He was only partly referring to the cold — 4 degrees in Buffalo, with brisk winds that made it feel like minus 20.

Residents said they fear the Bills' 31-14 loss may have cemented Buffalo's national reputation as a bust-league place where losers go to live in the cold and snow.

"They're probably laughing at us," said Bills fan Fran Harrington, who was shopping for bargains on Bills mementos at a sportsware store.

"Dallas destroyed Buffalo's image," said another shopper who would not give his name.

Buffalo can get a bad rap and not receive as much negative publicity as they get for losing three Super Bowls, said Bills fan Richard Rydzek. "The prominence of the loss is what people will remember about Buffalo."

The city canceled a welcome home rally for the Bills in front of City Hall scheduled for today because of the loss.

"We took some monster bets on Dallas, a lot of 50s (thousands) and 100s, and one $300,000 an hour before the game," Vaccaro said.

"But it was not enough to overtake the previous money on Buffalo."

"From what everybody is saying, it could be a record hand, and also a record win," Scott Kaminsky of Las Vegas Sports Consultants said Monday.

"Everybody did very, very well. A lot of people are saying it will be the best ever."

"There was an extreme amount of money on Buffalo," Kaminsky said. "Some are saying that three of four tickets written were on Buffalo."

"I think it's safe to say that the state of Nevada realized a record amount of money on this Super Bowl," said Vince Magliulo, manager of the sports book at Caesar's Palace.

"Our numbers will be enormous, and business fairly similar results around town in terms of the handle," said Art Manteris, director of the Las Vegas Hilton sports book.

John Avello, manager of the sports book at Ball's Resort, said his book handled close to $2 million and won approximately $200,000 because of heavy betting on Buffalo.

The team didn't want to face the humiliation. Thousands turned out to support the Bills at rallies the last two years after the team lost the Super Bowl.

"It would have placed an undue burden on a team to come down for a third straight losing rally, and it would have been a disservice to the fans," said Pat Donlon, spokesman for the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, which organized the rally.

The Bills were expected to return late Monday night at a remote airport at the Buffalo airport.

Compared with the euphoria throughout the city as the Bills roared through the AFC playoffs, it was deathly still in the aftermath of the game.

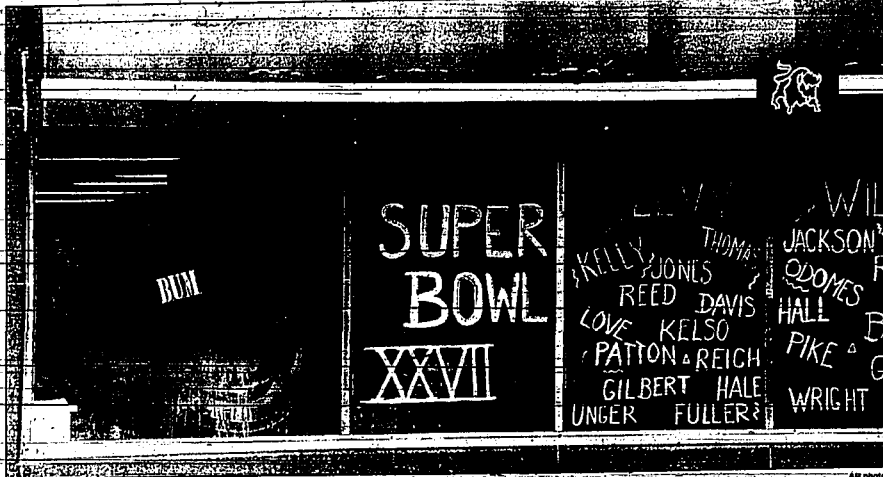

City police had extra patrols out Sunday night to deal with raucous fans, but the officers weren't needed, said Frank Piracci, deputy commissioner.

Piracci said he watched the game with other officers. One officer suggested they shoot the television screen the Bills' margin-of-defeat-growth larger, Piracci said.

They roared Monday morning causing a lot of traffic tieups and minor accidents.

Once people got to work, they did their best to keep their minds off the game.

"Everyone's just doing work," said Jack Martin, spokesman for Eric Winterberg removes a drawing of a Buffalo Bills helmet from the windows of the Greater Buffalo Convention & Visitors Bureau on Niagara Square in downtown Buffalo Monday. For the last two years, fans have come to the square to honor the Bills after the Super Bowl. This year, the team cancelled the rally.

Mayor Fisher-Pries in suburban Buffalo. "Nobody's really mentioning the game. It's like it never happened. I think it's just wishing the last three years were all a figment of our imagination."

At the Buffalo Convention & Visitors Bureau, a worker scrubbed away Super Bowl signs painted on the windows. Bills banners and signs remained up around the city, though most people had packed away their Bills hats and sweatshirts.

For the third straight year, employees at Underground Screen Printing of suburban North Tonawanda were set to print shirts declaring the Bills Super Bowl champs. For the third straight year, they had to pull out the Bills logo and replace it with an NFC East logo. "They're kind of used to putting in the other team," said Linda Owen, production manager for the shirts. "Which had orders to print Buffalo shirts celebrating the Cowboys' victory."

Philosophical Levy resists wholesale changes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Normally a restless sleeper following a game, Marv Levy was even more anxious Sunday night, and not just because of the hammering his team had just absorbed.

Twice, Levy's night was interrupted by callers trying to track down rumors that he had a heart attack after the Buffalo Bills' 52-17 beating by the Dallas Cowboys in the Super Bowl.

Levy insisted he was fine on Monday morning. "Maybe I was sick in fact, but that was it," he said with a wry smile.

Make no mistake, the mood at the Bills' downtown hotel was subdued as the team prepared for the trip back to Buffalo. Still, as Levy's joke reflected, the Bills took their first tentative steps toward recovery from the most embarrassing loss in team history.

"Honestly, a few hours after the game and the following morning, I hurt more than almost more than during the game when you're still involved with it," Levy said. "Just terrible disappointment. But I want to distinguish that from despair. Disappointment and despair are two different sentiments."

"Because there's tomorrow and there's another season. We've got some good players. We can make improvements. We plan to make improvements. You have to keep improving. I'm sure Dallas will continue to try and make improvements."

Their record third-straight Super Bowl loss will most certainly prompt calls for change. Levy talked improvements, not wholesale change.

"We had a good season and a lousy game," he said. "One of the most foully things in the world to do after you suffer a defeat is to immediately lash out and start to say, 'There's going to be a big shakeup around here.'"

"The result is you make the dumb decisions and unfair ones and you're just seeking to place blame when you do things like that," he said. Levy acknowledged there will also be calls for his job, but said that didn't bother him, as long as they didn't come from Bills owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr.

"Let my job situation be answered completely by the ownership," he said.

Like Levy, his players resisted suggestions that the Bills will have to have a drastic makeover following their historic loss.

"There's always ways you can improve your football team but I don't see any massive changes," center Kent Hull said. "That wouldn't be my philosophy."

"I don't think we need to go cleaning house at all," quarterback Frank Reich said. "I really don't see a need for change. I just think we need to play better."

"To say that it's all broken is not true," tight end Pete Metzelaars said. "You don't go to the Super Bowl three times in a row and be lousy. Unfortunately, we went out and played lousy."

"I don't know how much change is going to take place," offensive tackle Will Wolford said. "Even though we finished up the season with such a devastating loss and you're considered a loser, you still made it here."

Metzelaars, Wolford and James Lofton are among the Bills who will be free agents under the new collective bargaining agreement.

Wolford, a two-time Pro Bowl player, is the most likely Bills to receive contract offers, but the Bills could make him one of the free agents playing the new agreement allows.

"I love living in Buffalo, but it really comes down to a business decision," he said. "I certainly don't want to leave."

Metzelaars said he also had no interest in leaving the Bills. "All things being equal, I'd probably stay here."

The 36-year-old Lofton said he'd also like to stay. "As soon as I beat off the offers from 27 other teams," he said. "As one of the final four teams in the playoffs this year, the Bills would not be allowed to sign any free agents unless they lose a player to free agency."

On a meeting when positive thoughts were hard to find, Reich reached for one.

"We still have a Super Bowl championship to shoot for," he said. "That seems to have really motivated us the past couple of years. I don't think we have to worry about complacency, because now more than ever, there's no doubt what we want to do. We want to come back and win."

Reds owner reportedly will face 1-year ban

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's executive council will meet Wednesday in Chicago to decide whether to penalize Marge Schott. Reports said the ruling group will suspend the Cincinnati Reds owner for one year.

Although the council hasn't made a formal decision, unidentified owners were quoted in Monday's editions of the Los Angeles Times and Dayton Daily News as saying the council will impose a one-year ban on Schott, who has been accused of making racial and ethnic slurs.

"The report is in error," council chairman Bud Selig said Monday. "No decision has been reached at this time."

Officials and lawyers familiar with the council's deliberations said it appeared one or more owners on the council decided Schott should be suspended for one year and spoke on the assumption the full group will go along with that penalty. Officials have said for the past few weeks that they expected a one-year penalty plus a fine.

It would be the first ban imposed on an owner since 1989, when George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees agreed to an indefinite ban following his $40,000 payment to and association with a gambler. Steinbrenner is to be reinstated on March 1.

"I haven't heard anything about this. I don't know anything about this," Schott said Monday, disputing the council's right to penalize her.

"These people have no right. They know nothing. It's nothing. It was started by one cheap employee. After 25 years in the business and helping lots of people," Schott said before hanging up the telephone. Schott, 57, a lawyer, Robert Bennett, said he was told Monday by National League counsel Robert Kheel that a decision hadn't been made. Bennett has threatened to fight any penalty in court despite the Major League Agreement's ban on lawsuits against the council by owners.

The council, acting in the absence of a commissioner, may impose a suspension or a fine of up to $250,000 for conduct "not in the best interests of baseball." Baseball officials expect a suit to be filed on a number of grounds, possibly including alleged antitrust violations.

Schott, personally or through her businesses, controls 64 of the Reds' 15 ownership shares, and is the team's managing general partner. Carl Kroch, a limited partner who previously has said Schott, said it would take a 60-percent vote of the partnership to elect a new managing general partner. Kroch said he would want George Strike, a limited partner who is chairman of American Laundry Machinery Inc., to run the Reds if Schott is suspended.

"I know a better man than any of the others, and I consider him to be a very capable business person," said Kroch, chairman of Kroch's & Brentano's Inc., bookstores based in Chicago.

The allegations against Schott became public last year in a lawsuit filed by former Reds controller Jim Sabos, who claimed Schott had threatened to sue him for allegedly discriminatory hiring practices.

Schott, who took over as the Reds majority owner on Dec. 21, 1984, was accused by several people of making racial slurs against blacks, Jews and Asians.

Police say Dolphin gave wrong name at arrest

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Police have a warrant for the arrest of Miami Dolphins running back Bobby Humphrey, who was released on bond Monday after being charged with possession of cocaine and aggravated assault.

Columbus police Maj. Robert Matthews said they are looking for Humphrey again because he gave a false name to police when he was arrested Sunday. Humphrey said his name was Robert Humphrey.

Giving police a false name is a misdemeanor in Georgia, Matthews said.

"We have no idea where he is," Matthews said. "We talked to the people in Miami and they have been very helpful."

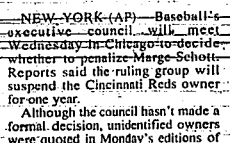

Dolphin officials said they would encourage Humphrey to turn himself in if he calls them, Matthews said. "If Humphrey does turn himself in, we can just make bond and be on his way," Matthews said.

Humphrey, 26, was arrested in a Columbus hotel early Sunday when police found him fighting with Vantrese Davis, a teammate of his at Alabama, Matthews said.

Stubbs survey would gather vital information on ODDM

The teacher survey instigated by state Rep. Mark Stubbs is an excellent idea, and Twin Falls School District officials should welcome it instead of discouraging it.

Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, went head-to-head with Superintendent Donnell Donich last week after Donich blocked Stubbs' attempt to circulate questionnaires dealing with the Outcome Driven Development Model. Stubbs needed School Board permission, Donich contended.

Although Donich, temporarily thwarted the survey, his high-handed reaction gave credence to the creeping community suspicion that ODDM is a campaign of quiet tyranny.

ODDM is a new educational philosophy that aims to replace tired teaching methods with greater attention to what children actually learn. Although the system's principles make a good deal of sense, the school district has stumbled into a public relations quagmire.

Some Twin Falls parents (and students) complain that ODDM promotes mediocrity and stifles excellence. Some parents have circulated stories about teachers being coerced into embracing ODDM and afraid to disagree.

Donich and other administrators vehemently deny any coercion. They say ODDM participation is voluntary and based on creative cooperation by teachers and supervisors.

These two visions of ODDM are strikingly at odds, and the situation should alarm School Board members. If the parent-activists are right, then the school administration is misleading the public, suppressing internal dissent and courting disaster. If the administration version is correct, then the district is the victim of vicious slander.

That's where Stubbs' survey can be useful. It tackles the parents' allegations head-on in a way the district itself cannot. It asks whether ODDM really is voluntary, among other pertinent questions, and it offers teachers a forum for candor.

Even if the survey weren't so obviously useful, Donich had no right to interfere. State legislators carry a daunting responsibility for setting educational policies and budgets. They have every right to communicate with teachers.

Excuse us for saying so, but in giving Stubbs' survey, Donich gives the impression of fearing his employees' honest opinions. That impression reinforces the worst fears of the district's critics.

But it isn't necessarily an accurate impression. A more charitable interpretation is that he simply lost his temper and made a public-relations blunder.

The way to correct the blunder is to invite Stubbs back into the schools, and for the district to give him cooperation.

When the School Board meets tonight, Donich should ask the board to pass a resolution to that effect.

Americans need to finally bite the bullet

It's crunch time. The piper is tallying up the bill. Or is that a saxophone player sitting there with a calculator and a pile of "past due" notices?

Either way, we owe. And what we have to decide now is whether we want to start paying the national tab or keep pretending that the deficit isn't killing the country.

You and I have to decide this, yes, and then telegraph it to Washington as quickly as we got on the phone about Zoe Baird.

I'd like to think I know how the calls will go. I'd like to think that the past year of citizen involvement was not just a fluke and we meant it when we said we wanted to stop playing politics and really fix a totting structure.

But I've been wrong before! Perhaps the Ross Perot movement was a fluke born of the restlessness that gets people in the streets with signs every four years. Perhaps Perot was simply good TV when he talked about sacrifice. God knows we didn't elect him.

We elected the guy who said he could give the middle class a tax cut and still chop the deficit in half. I even believed him, sort of, when the sun was shining and I hadn't looked at the Visa bill for a while. Maybe he believed it, too.

I suppose we could spend the next four years arguing about who said what and whether Clinton technically broke his campaign promise, because, after all, he was basing deficit projections on the wrong numbers that somebody else gave him.

Susan Trausch

We could dredge up "Read my lips" and bash George Bush around some more or use him to prove that you can't trust either party in the Oval Office.

We could wait about "tax and spend" Democrats and start organizing fund-raisers for Jack Kemp, the guy who can really give us nirvana, just the way Ronald Reagan did.

Or we could look in the bathroom mirror and say: "The buck just stopped."

According to the latest estimates, the deficit, or what the country borrows annually to pay its bills, will double and hit $650 billion by the year 2003 if we sit by and watch it.

The deficit should not be confused with the national debt, which is everything we have borrowed since the beginning of time and which is expected to be about $7.5 trillion three years after the turn of the century.

These numbers are insane. So insane that a lot of us have said: "Why even try to pay? Better we should find a sumo wrestler and put him on a diet."

But sometime not too far down the road the people who lend us money will stop, possibly all at once. The ensuing economic disaster will make us long for those lax hikes and service cuts we could have lived with; if a bit painfully, back in 1993.

I think the public is frightened enough to see this and to take the bad news from Bill now with a minimum of grumbling, providing the goal is clearly articulated and everybody shares the pain.

Americans have a capacity to pull together for the common good that is rarely tapped by the country's leaders. Why do we all remember John F. Kennedy's inaugural speech? Because he said, "Ask not what your country can do for you."

We want to serve, which is quite different from being used. We want to be counted, to have the mission's success or failure rest with us, the living, breathing democracy.

Don't be afraid of us, Bill. We are not special-interest groups. We are not the media. We are not majority leaders and whips. We are something bigger.

Talk to us: Call us up. Give us the boldest economic plan you and your advisers can design, even if that means trimming the Social Security benefits in 20 years. Write it for the future, for our great-grandchildren, for the people who will look back from the year 3000 and say, "Nice work. Thanks."

Any loss will turn to much and get us deeper in the hole. And then I don't think we'll ever get out.

Editorial writer missed point of Baird position

The recent public outcry against giving Zoe Baird the attorney general's post after she knowingly violated immigration and tax laws should have been expected.

After all, the man who nominated her campaigned for change and promised to install tough new ethical guidelines for his mistakes.

Such reforms were a good idea. But the Clinton administration's initial rush to brush Baird's problems under the rug and push for her confirmation despite them was not.

Our president was smart to reverse course and accept her withdrawal.

That episode struck a nerve with Idahoans.

Many people know small businessmen or farmers who have unknowingly run afoul of immigration laws and paid dearly for their mistakes.

They weren't extended the "let's just forget about it" treatment that almost prevailed in the case of Clinton's nominee. Many Americans have been prosecuted for similar offenses with great zeal at significant expense to the treasury and cost to them and their families.

The most publicized case in Idaho has been that of Dan Symms.

Unlike Zoe Baird, he thought he was living up to the law, and he paid Social Security taxes on his workers. The government had to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars and three years investigating him before they found violations.

And far from being forgotten after fines were paid, those violations earned him a title much different than the exalted one almost given to Baird. Today he's called a felon.

That's why I suggested to the president that if he planned to pursue the Baird nomination and wanted the Senate to forget this attorney's knowing violation of the law, he should be prepared for me to ask for his pardon of people who unknowingly violated similar laws.

That point caused the publisher of the Post Register to hit the roof, saying "two wrongs don't make a right!" And the resulting editorial has been reprinted in two other Idaho papers.

It's a shame he missed my point completely. And it's a shame these papers repeated his mistake.

I never suggested that we would have to empty the jails of all crooks if Zoe Baird became attorney general. That would be wrong. Instead, I was forcing people to confront the obvious unfairness of the situation.

Why should Dan Symms and other Americans have to go through life with a letter for an unknown violation of the law if Zoe Baird was to walk on a red carpet of the attorney general's office?

Is equal justice such a difficult concept? Not for hundreds of Idahoans who called my office.

Larry Craig is Idaho's senior U.S. senator. This commentary is in reply to an Idaho Falls Post-Register editorial reprinted in The Times-News Jan. 25.

Correction

The word "million" was inadvertently omitted from a letter Monday from Carl H. Nellis, regional supervisor for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, referring to state funds for wildlife depredation reimbursement. The sentence should have read as follows:

"The principal amount in the secondary account comes from two sources: (1) a one-time appropriation of $1 million from the state general fund (tax dollars) and (2) a maximum of $1.25 million from the interest generated by the department's free-fund balance (non-tax dollars)."

The Times-News regrets the error.

Koalas face extinction

The United States isn't the only country where greed is taking a heavy toll on wildlife. Australia's koala needs at least one pound of gum (eucalyptus) leaves per day, its only food source, but incredibly, no habitat protection exists anywhere in Australia for them. Ever since ranchers, logging operations, major tourist resorts, developments and human-caused diseases deadly to the koala are all threatening Australia's "national" animal.

In addition, a huge upswing in the incidence of leukemia, tumors and cancer among koalas is being attributed to heavy use of agricultural chemicals on Australia's eastern seaboard (the average eucalyptus tree extends 35 feet into the earth and sucks up more than 70 gallons of groundwater each day).

Another growing killer of koalas is roadside photo sanctuaries where koalas are forcibly rounded up, prodded, passed about on sightseeing buses like brochures so hundreds of picture-hungry morons can capture one of these fabulous creatures on film. Even pregnant mothers and infants are used in these freak shows, which go on eight hours a day, seven days a week. So much for "eco-tourism."

American zoos are also fanning the flames. Three subspecies of koala are currently held in captivity in U.S. zoos—mostly in California. Temporary koala loans of six months or more have been established also, with the lending institutions and zoos making big bucks while the koalas frequently die en route or while on loan due to stress, foreign diseases and incompetent zokeeping (the Los Angeles Zoo has had two die in as many years).

Since the United States is a prime source of revenue for Australia via tourism, trade and zoo loans, letters of protest will definitely be taken seriously. Send them to Michael John Cook, Ambassador to Australia, 1601 Massachusetts Ave. N.W., Washington, DC 20036; the Australian Tourist Commission, 489 Fifth Ave. 31st Floor, New York, NY 10017; or 2121 Avenue of the Stars, Suite 1200, Los Angeles, CA 90067. Tell them you'll "not set foot in Australia nor buy anything Australian until this undefeatable genocide is stopped. Money talks."

For more information or donations to their "Koala Campaign," contact the Friends of Animals, P.O. Box 1244, Norwalk, CT 06856; 203-884-5333; fax 203-853-9107.

It's one thing to buy a T-shirt proclaiming your love for cute creatures. It's something else entirely to actually spend time trying to save them. This Australian atrocity is a good place to start.

Democrats need new chairman

The Democratic Party in Idaho was evicted on Nov. 3, 1992. The use of the term "a Democratic Party" is a misnomer, however, since there has been no party recognizable since the mid-70s, following the absorption of the Democratic Party into the Frank Church organization engineered by Carl Burke. Since 1980, the Democratic Party has been an organization designed only to eat up the check-off funds.

The failure of the party was on display in 1992.

Mr. Stallings ran an absolutely awful campaign, but the failure of that campaign and the failure to elect Richard Stallings was exacerbated by the fact that the state party chairman was Mr. Wetherell, who was identified with Mr. Kempthorne.

Mr. Wetherell took absolutely no part in that campaign and the implication is, of course, that he was supporting Mr. Kempthorne. The conflict of interest between Mr. Wetherell being state chairman of the Democratic Party and a great deal of money to Mr. Kempthorne's was obvious months ago, and Mr. Wetherell should have voluntarily resigned as state chairman.

Kempthorne has finally established the Boise mayor's office as a base to run statewide. Mr. Wetherell was supposed to be a right-wing conservative (almost right-wing nut) to replace Kempthorne and establish a new statewide candidate.

No Democratic Party has existed in Idaho for years, but it really is painful to watch the party atempted into the ground. One would hope that the Central Committee review itself, its conduct and determine what its future should be, which might include asking the Legislature to simply revoke the statutes creating a party structure so that the charade no longer exists.

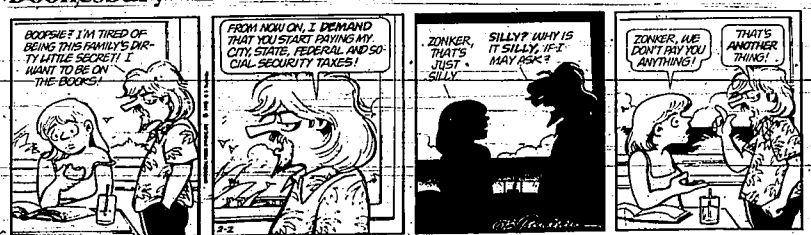

The immediate action that should take place is, of course, to get rid of Wetherell promptly and establish an organization that has a public role.

Rumors are flying that Kempthorne provided Mr. Wetherell with tickets for the inaugural. Even if that is only a rumor and not true, it represents the public perception of Mr. Wetherell's support of Kempthorne. Rumors such as the receipt of prized tickets by the Democratic state chairman from a Republican office holder can only surface when the conditions in the last campaign exist.

Stalingrad: Former enemies trade memories, embrace at memorial on WWII battle's 50th anniversary

VOLGOGRAD, Russia (AP) — Wounded four times during the battle of Stalingrad, Yakov Kiselev spends his days on a cot in a dim corridor crowded with 10 other men.

He and the other-improvised veterans were too sick to join the former Russian and German soldiers who embraced and traded stories Monday to mark the 50th anniversary of Stalingrad, perhaps the decisive battle of World War II.

The rundown Volgograd retirement home where Kiselev, 80, has lived the past eight years underlined the fact that Germany, which lost the battle and the war, is prosperous, while the victorious Soviets often live in misery.

Kiselev gets $300 a month. Worth about $1.50, that is enough to buy a kilo of bad sausage in the new Russia, or three packs of Marlboro cigarettes. Most of the pension goes directly to the home where he lives.

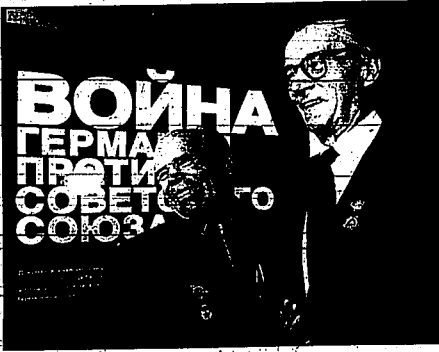

Kiselev's eyes brimmed with tears when the other old veterans congratulated him on the anniversary. They wept and sang Russian patriotic songs.

The Battle of Stalingrad ended on Feb. 2, 1943, with the surrender of Nazi Field Marshal Friedrich Paulus to Soviet forces. The defeat crushed Hitler's hopes of isolating the Soviet heartland from the southern oil fields.

More than 1 million Soviet soldiers and civilians perished in the fight for Stalingrad, renamed Volgograd after the death of Stalin. Hundreds of thousands of Germans also perished.

On Monday, President Boris Yeltsin used the anniversary to rally Russians who are enduring economic woes.

"Stalingrad is a convincing testament that however difficult it might be, our people can find the strength and the resolution to overcome harsh odds together," Yeltsin said in a statement.

He also sought to dissolve lingering hatred of Germans.

"Former enemies have become partners," he said. "We are brought together to the people of Germany by basic democratic and moral values, by a common striving for peace and stability in Europe and the whole world."

Russian flags flew overhead, but the ceremonies at Volgograd were characterized by the same Soviet-style pomp of years past.

Real emotion surfaced when German and former Soviet veterans — met informally at the opening of an exhibit at the Museum of the Battle of Stalingrad.

"Everybody has hugged me. Nobody has cursed us for being Germans. It's unforgettable," said Gerhard Dengler, a professor of international relations from Berlin.

Victory at Stalingrad was used by the Communist Party as a symbol of Soviet superiority. Despite the collapse of the Soviet Union, many veterans remain fiercely patriotic.

"We defended our homeland. Whether it's Russia or the Soviet Union, it's all the same to us," said veteran Ivan Zharkov, speaking in a telephone to raise money for Russians who suffered during World War II.

Musin, Galinovich, 72, lost a leg at Stalingrad and has been on crutches for half a century. But the ethnic Tatar came hundreds of miles from his home in the central Russian city of Kazan to participate in the ceremonies.

"We fought here. We lost our blood and our bones. We can never forget this place," he said.

Vasily Demidov brought his grandson and a photograph of Stalin to a ceremony — remaining a Volgograd square in honor of Stalingrad.

"People have started to forget about Stalin. We cannot allow that. Stalin saved the whole world," Demidov said.

Dengler, 70, was an artillery captain during the battle, which began with the German advance on the Volga River city in the summer of 1942.

He was one of 91,000 Germans left alive when the last Nazi unit surrendered. Only 6,000 German survivors from Stalingrad made it home after the war, many after spending years in Soviet prison camps. Of those, about 1,000 are still alive.

"I never experienced hate from the Russians. They had a lot of understanding for us," said Dr. Fritz Pindtel, a doctor from the city of Coburg who speaks good Russian from his years in a Soviet prison camp.

Iran honors Khomeini, revolution

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Tens of thousands of people converged on the tomb of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Monday, marking the 14th anniversary of his return from exile to a country now increasingly preoccupied by economic woes.

Khomeini's stature as an imam, or Islamic saint, continues to grow. Nearly four years after his death he remains the central figure in celebrations culminating in the official anniversary of the Islamic revolution on Feb. 11.

Iran has been gripped with deep-rooted economic problems that have left much of the country's population of 60 million worn out from the daily struggle to make ends meet.

"The fact is that with every revolution the first day you see great enthusiasm, but it gradually dissipates," said Morteza Firozi, editor in chief of the Tehran Times, an English-language newspaper.

"Our revolution has entered a phase where we want to create order. The people want the economic situation to improve," he said.

Iran's basic blueprint — has been to try to preserve — the cultural guidelines Khomeini established while eliminating most of the state control that came with the revolution.

The government of President Hashemi Rafsanjani hopes to attract investment from abroad to rebuild manufacturing plants and a military decimated by neglect and the 1980-88 war with Iraq.

"Rafsanjani must create enough security and confidence in Iranians so they can bring back assets and invest here," said Rajai-Khorasani, a member of parliament and former U.N. ambassador.

Overseas, Iran wants to lead an independent Islamic bloc.

Tehran denies frequent charges by Washington and others that it seeks to export Islamic fundamentalism, and build up a huge arsenal, including nuclear weapons, to achieve that end.

"We believe the West ought to respect Islamic public opinion and leave Muslims to themselves to choose their destiny on the basis of their own convictions," Rafsanjani said Sunday in his first news conference with foreign reporters in two years.

"They cannot go on suppressing Muslim people forever. They may be able to postpone events, delay certain events, but the more they are delayed, the more explosive they will become," he said.

Iran emerged from the Persian Gulf War in a strong position, its Arab neighbors and their Western protectors grateful Tehran did not do anything to wreck the offensive against Baghdad.

But that went up in smoke over a series of problems ranging from territorial disputes to the bounty offered for killing British writer Salman Rushdie, who was condemned by Khomeini for blaspheming Islam. Iran says the West constantly generates new excuses to try to punish

Law aims to make pit bulls extinct

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A draconian law aimed at making pit bull terriers extinct in the Netherlands took effect Monday.

The Animal Health and Welfare Act makes it illegal to own, import, breed or sell the unpredictable and sometimes savage dogs, Agriculture Ministry spokesman Benno Bruggink said.

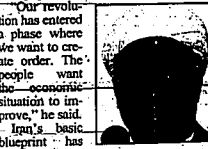

The law allows current owners to keep their pets, including puppies born up to "mid-April," providing they are sterilized and registered with a central authority.

School board decides Stuart-O'Leary boundary

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — About 100 students who normally would attend O'Leary Junior High School next year could instead attend Stuart Junior High School, district officials say.

The boundary change is intended to balance enrollment at Stuart and O'Leary because of the new classroom addition to Stuart.

The new district building approved last May as part of a $9.85 million bond issue election will be completed by Aug. 45, Stuart Principal Dale Thomsberry said.

Under the proposal, next year's seventh- and eighth-grade students who live within a downtown triangle bordered by Washington Street, Addison Avenue and Shoshone Street, will attend school at Stuart. Otherwise, the junior high boundaries will remain the same.

The School Board will decide whether to change the district's junior high school boundaries at 7 p.m. tonight at 452 Caswell Ave. W. The public is welcome to attend the meeting.

This year, students within that area all attended O'Leary, Thomsberry said.

Next year's ninth-graders who live within that triangular area will still attend O'Leary next year, unless they wish to attend Stuart, Thomsberry said.

The reason these students are not being shifted is because they have already attended O'Leary two years.

"We're going to do it with the least amount of obstruction to the kids," he said.

Then beginning in the 1994-95 school year, all ninth-grade students from the triangular area will also attend Stuart.

The district will either have to shift four of five teachers from O'Leary to Stuart to handle the increase at Stuart or hire new teachers, Thomsberry said.

Junior high school teachers and administrators have been discussing the new boundary changes for the past several months, he said.

They decided on the downtown area because it is already closer to Stuart than O'Leary, Thomsberry said.

Parents of children in that area have been requesting to have their children transferred to Stuart because it is closer for years, he said.

With the changes, students leaving Lincoln Elementary School, Harrison Elementary School and Perrine Elementary School will attend Stuart.

The new building at Stuart, coupled with the boundary changes, will enable the district to relieve crowding at both junior high schools and leave room for future growth, Thomsberry said.

Senate approves bill against inhaling fumes

BOISE — A bill making it illegal for minors to inhale gasoline fumes, glue or other volatile substances to get high won unanimous approval Monday by a Senate panel.

The Senate Judiciary, Rules and Administration Committee unanimously sent the bill, sponsored by Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer, to the full Senate, which likely will vote on it late this week.

The bill makes it a misdemeanor for anyone under 18 to inhale aerosol sprays or other inhalants in order to cause "intoxication, inebriation, excitement, stupefaction or the dulling of the brain or nervous system."

Judges would have the option of either fining minors convicted of possessing and using inhalants $300 and/or sending them to jail for 30 days, or placing them in the juvenile justice system.

A 14-year-old Twin Falls girl, Sam Friel, was badly burned while "huffing," or inhaling gasoline fumes, in downtown Twin Falls last fall.

"I've seen a lot of these kind of kids in school," said Darrington, a teacher at Burley Junior High School. "Some kids need the penalty, and some need another kind of support system. Each kid is different."

Bill provides for more local control over hydro projects

BOISE — A Senate committee Monday introduced a bill that would give the Idaho Department of Water Resources more say over the licensing of small hydropower projects.

The measure would authorize Water Resources to provide information to federal regulators on the hydraulics and structural capability of small dams.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission currently is responsible for licensing and overseeing hydropower projects, but federal law permits state agencies to comment and provide information on them.

"Right now, the state Division of Environmental Quality gives FERC data on the water quality impact of proposed projects," said Norm Young, administrator of DWR's Water Management Division, said his agency ought to have input into the permitting process too.

In the past eight years, Young told the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, 12 small hydro projects have failed, either during construction or shortly thereafter.

The most recent significant failure was last spring's collapse of the Marysville Dam on the Falls River.

Jerome County to refine way it assesses, collects landfill fees

JEROME — Assessing and collecting landfill fees for Jerome County needs some refining, commissioners say, and they've set about that task.

Of the 12,000 taxing parcels in the county, 22 individuals refused to pay the fees, and those cases will be turned over to the Jerome County Prosecuting Attorney John Horgan.

"Statutorily we have the right to charge the fees," Commissioner Veronica Lierman said.

Twenty people did not receive notices of the fee primarily because the tax rolls have different names in the computer system. About 10 need additional identification of the taxable property.

Residents are charged an $80 fee per year, and businesses are charged a minimum of $160.

The $160 fee is adjusted according to the amount of garbage the refuse hauling company, P.S.I. Waste Systems of Twin Falls, reports to the county for each place of business.

"Some local businesses do not receive the bill for the landfill fee because the building or real property is owned by a mortgage company, bank or other financial agency. In that case, the fee is charged to the owning agency, not the business occupying the building," Lierman said.

There were some errors and omissions in the billings. These are being corrected, Lierman said.

The commissioners are organizing a "Citizens Committee" to review charges, payments and revisions to procedures that would make the fees more equitable. Any Jerome County resident who would like to be considered as a member of the committee is asked to call the commissioners at 324-8811.

Clear Lake Grade project moves closer to reality

The Times-News

SHOSHONE — For the hundreds who drive the Magic Valley's most harrowing farm-to-market road each day, there's relief just around the next switchback.

The last remaining hurdle to construction of the Clear Lake Grade project through the Snake River Canyon north of Burley may be about to be cleared, Loren Thomas, district engineer with the Idaho Transportation Department, said Monday.

"It's possible we could have it completed by the end of the year if things fall into place," he said.

Thomas said the state has completed its appraisal of right-of-way property. After an appraisal is done by an outside agency to guarantee fair-market value, the state can start buying up the rights-of-way.

"That's a process that can take 24 hours to 48 months," he said. "But if all of its members agree, we're looking at April or May to start."

As soon as property negotiations are completed, the department will begin soliciting bids for the project, Thomas said. That process will last about two months; construction itself will take from seven to eight months.

The project will provide a new road to the east of the current one, with two, 12-foot lanes, wide shoulders, a guardrail and an additional truck climbing lane for use on the steepest part of the hill.

Clear Lake Grade is an important economic link between agricultural production areas north of the Snake River and food-processing plants in the Burley area.

Total cost of the project will be $6 million. The Legislature earmarked $3 million, which with interest now totals $3.6 million, and the department has agreed to come up with the rest of the money.

Thomas said hydrogeological studies showed the project wouldn't hurt the water table or the nearby Clear Springs Trout Farm.

Burley City Council approves Trans IV bus service funding

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — The Burley City Council agreed Monday night to help pay for Trans IV bus service for another year, although a few of its members weren't happy about footing the bill.

Last year, the council agreed to pay $280 per month for the service. This year, Trans IV asked for $140 monthly.

The council had previously approved a $70-per-month payment, but Councilman Clay Handy said he decided that Burley might be able to pay more.

"It is a rather small request and it does help a few people," Handy explained.

Trans IV is a Twin Falls-based regional commuter and special-service bus company that carries many elderly and physically disabled passengers.

He said Trans IV still disagree with it in principle, Handy said.

Last year, Handy said too many programs are funded on the federal level and then part of the funding burden gets thrust on cities.

He said Trans IV has made a number of improvements, although it is still not a "legitimate" public transportation system.

Magic Valley cities and counties have been asked to contribute funds so that the company can qualify for matching funds.

Twin Falls to join county landfill

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city will join the county in its landfill plan, providing that Hub Butte south of Twin Falls houses the facility.

The City Council voted 5-1 Monday night to join the county plan.

Councilwoman Pam Dowd voted no, saying she has many questions.

Among her reasons for voting against it, Dowd listed:

- The county still has not acquired the acreage for the landfill from the Bureau of Land Management;

- Construction costs might be higher than estimated;

- The county's cost study was not audited like that of the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District;

- Transfer stations are not included in the county's cost estimates;

- The county already spent $120,000 with the regional district.

"Those kind of throw-up flags as to whether I can cast a yes vote to go with the county," Dowd said.

Citing a national study, Dowd also said that joining a regional plan might be the better solution.

But the other council members were not swayed.

Even though he remains unsatisfied with cost estimates from the county or the regional district, Councilman Tom Condie voted to join the county plan.

Real costs likely cannot be known until the landfill is built, he said.

Councilman Jim Vickers also voted to join the county plan, but said if the landfill is not built on Hub Butte, the city should reconsider if another location proves more costly.

Mayor Howard Allen said recently that given the cost estimates and that the city would have to build a transfer station for doing a good job, if it urged area businesses to do a better job of clearing snow on their sidewalks and driveways.

But Dowd said Monday night that the cost of buying industrial property for a transfer station might not be as expensive as the council had thought. Dowd said she saw industrial property for sale Monday that cost far less per acre than had been estimated.

She also said a contractor told her that digging on the site took a lot longer than other places, but City Manager Tom Courtney said the engineers had considered that in their cost estimates.

Councilman Mary P. Husky missed the vote because of illness, he said.

After talking about the landfill, the council turned its mind from trash to snow.

City Engineer Gary Young explained several options for plowing residential streets.

These include plowing from the gutter to the middle of the street; plowing from the middle of the gutter to the middle of the street; plowing the middle and placing snow on the sidewalks or yards beyond street.

Young suggested that the best solution would be to plow from gutters to the middle of streets when necessary. But that does not mean after every snowstorm.

City Manager Tom Courtney said Friday that residential streets would be cleared only under "extreme circumstances."

The cost to clear 100 miles of city roads exceeds $60,000, Young estimated.

If it besides the cost, the city lacks the equipment and manpower, he said.

"The physical capability to haul snow off of 140 miles of streets just isn't there," he said.

The city keeps three road graders and nine dump trucks to use for snow removal. Four of the trucks have sanding units and two have plows. The city budget allows $6,000 for sanding after heavy storms, Young said.

The only area resident who went to the meeting to talk about snow removal, Carter-Killingier, complimented the city for doing a good job. "If it urged area businesses to do a better job of clearing snow on their sidewalks and driveways,"

Courtney told the council that the city's snow-removal plan is based on the "simple fact that there is a community that doesn't have a lot of snow."

Even when snow falls, it usually melts quickly, Courtney said.

Commission: Residents need to vote on Sunday liquor sales

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Commission says getting Sunday liquor sales in the county will need more than a public hearing.

It will take a vote of county residents.

Such a vote will take place in 1994, but if local restaurants and bar owners want one sooner they must gather about 6,000 signatures in favor of an initiative vote before then.

Mike Brock, manager of the Sandpiper Restaurant, and Stan Thomas of the Rock Creek, asked the commissioners Monday to hold a public hearing on Sunday liquor sales.

"If people are opposed, let them come down and voice their views. I'd like to talk to them," Brock said.

But the commissioners said they would not hold a public hearing.

"Let's face it, they're stacked. The people who are pushing the issue will be out in force," Commissioner Jim Fraley said.

He cited the landfill debate — Hansen Butte area and other county residents killed the idea of building a landfill there — and the dairy ordinance hearings as examples of "stacked" meetings.

Besides, county voters defeated Sunday sales in 1986 and 1988.

"I'm not going to go against the vote of the people," Fraley said.

Brock said the issue should be one of personal choice and fairness, besides financial considerations.

"Prohibition didn't work earlier in the century and doesn't work now. If someone doesn't want to drink on Sunday they shouldn't be able to stop me," he said.

He wouldn't expect to gain a lot from Sunday sales, Brock said. But it might mean the difference between someone deciding to spend money at other businesses, such as motels or stores, he said.

With Jackpot and Boise not too far away, the Sunday prohibition might cost the city convention business, Brock said.

Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said that besides personal reasons, his daughter was killed by a drunk driver several years ago — he also will not go against prior votes on the issue.

"I will not go against the public trust," Hempleman said.

Sunday sales would give someone one more opportunity to drive drunk, he said.

But Brock and Thomas said both their businesses watch patrons to make sure they do not drive drunk. They offer cab rides home, or will arrange other rides, they said.

If restaurant and bar owners do not push for a special initiative election on Sunday sales, the issue will be on the ballot in 1994 and they will abide by the advisory vote, the commissioners said.

"The commission could OK Sunday sales without an advisory vote but has chosen not to do so. Most other Idaho counties allow Sunday sales and Brock has urged the Twin Falls commission to do the same in the interest of fairness."

But besides a slip-up last November, local drunk purveyors have been treated fairly, they said. Sunday sales was supposed to have been on the ballot last November but was left off because of a mistake.

Despite suit's cost, lawmakers unlikely to revise school formula

By Drew Desilver
Times-News writer

BOISE - The tax bill for two lawsuits challenging the way the state channels money to public schools has generated a Senate Education Committee Monday.

But despite the rising cost of the lawsuit and the possibility of the Legislature losing control of the school funding formula to a judge, lawmakers are unlikely to undertake what most admit is a long-overdue revision of the formula.

Two groups of local school districts filed the suits in 1990. They argued that the formula creates such large funding disparities that it violates the state Constitution's requirement that the public school system be "general, uniform and thorough."

Fourth District Judge Gerald Schneider dismissed the suits last year, saying that the courts should not become involved in a political question. Some districts dropped out of the suits at that point, but the rest appealed Schneider's decision to the state Supreme Court.

The state supreme court has heard the suits and held arguments last September. There is "a good possibility" it will rule before the end of the legislative session, Deputy Attorney General William Von Tegen told the education panel.

Von Tegen estimated that taxpayers have already shelled out $439,000, via local property taxes and statewide general taxes, to pay for the lawsuit.

And, he added, "In my view, I don't think we've accomplished anything, other than to bring the suits on."

He warned lawmakers that the Supreme Court may send the case back to Schneider for trial, potentially taking the issue out of the Legislature's hands.

"If the Legislature ignores its responsibility to examine and review this area, I think there's a point where the courts would step in," von Tegen said. "But as long as you're actively engaged in it, I think the courts will stay out."

In several other states, including Texas, New Jersey and Kentucky, districts have won similar suits, prompting judges to rewrite funding formulas or order massive increases in state aid.

Last week, state Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans presented the committee with a plan to revamp Idaho's complex funding formula. The plan would effectively transfer about $9 million from wealthier districts to more property-poor, lower-wealth districts.

Committee Chairman John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, acknowledged that the formula was out of date, and said he hoped it wouldn't take "the hammer of chaos" created by the courts "to force lawmakers to change it."

But, Hansen added, a lack of consensus in the education community on what changes are needed, combined with the tendency of lawmakers to focus on how changes would affect schools in their home districts, probably mean there won't be much action this year.

"The trouble is getting people to take a deep breath and analyze it as a whole," he said. "If we had the luxury of not having a school formula and sitting down today to come up with one, I know it wouldn't look like what we have now. But the tendency is to look at dollars under the old formula versus dollars under the new formula, not to consider what would be the best overall public policy."

Assistant Minority Leader Denny Davis, D-Gooding, also suggested that one solution would be to impose a uniform statewide property tax levy for school maintenance and operations, redistributing excess revenues from wealthier districts to poorer ones.

Davis admitted that taxpayers in the richer districts, which can get by with lower levy rates, probably would complain about having to pay higher property taxes to help out poorer districts.

But Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, said the biggest hit to taxpayers could come if a judge, rather than lawmakers, ends up revising the funding formula. "Historically, as I've looked at other states, those court decisions have placed enormous burdens on local property taxes or other taxes to support local schools," Noh said.

Man's condition improves to fair

JEROME - A Jerome man injured in a Saturday inter-tubing accident remained in a Boise hospital Monday, but his condition was improving.

Kevin S. Gregory, 20, was moved out of the intensive care unit at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center Monday and his condition was upgraded to fair, a hospital spokesman said.

Gregory and Nathan Hill, age 10 or 11, were injured when the inner-tube they were riding slid into Idaho Highway 46 near the Camas-Gooding county line, Camas County dispatcher Linda Martin said.

Hill was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was treated and released, Martin said.

The boys apparently were taking a different route down the mountain than the one commonly used by sledgers, and missed the end of the run, Martin said.

"They're lucky they weren't killed," she said.

County might house illegal immigrants

TWIN FALLS - The county might house illegal immigrants in the county jail if it can reach an agreement with the U.S. Border Patrol.

Gregory and Nathan Hill, age 10 or 11, were injured when the inner-tube they were riding slid into Idaho Highway 46 near the Camas-Gooding county line, Camas County dispatcher Linda Martin said.

The county would hold the prisoners for no more than two weeks and only if the federal government would provide medical insurance for the prisoners and indemnify the county in case of an accident, the commissioners said.

The agency would have to pay a daily rate for each prisoner.

If the federal agency comes back with a proposal, the commissioners said they would consider it.

Jerome to hear audit on bookkeeping

JEROME - An audit report of city bookkeeping will be presented to the Jerome City Council Tuesday.

Promotion of city employees, paying more than $37,500 in workman compensation costs and amending city codes for putting in curbs and gutters are also on the Tuesday agenda.

The council will hold a work session at 6:30 p.m. with the regular meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. in the City Hall. The work session and regular meeting are open to the public.

City of Twin Falls amends zoning code

TWIN FALLS - The City Council voted Monday night to amend the zoning code to allow "gold" driving ranges in residential areas with fourplexes.

To operate a driving range in the R-4 zone, however, will require a special-use permit.

Ed Harper and Phil McRobert asked for the change so they can build a driving range on Park Avenue east of Adams-Wendover. With the amendment, the two now can ask the city Planning and Zoning Commission for special-use permit for the facility.

State funding for mental health status quo

BLACKFOOT (AP) - Idaho's mental health system did not stand to gain much under Gov. Cecil Andrus' proposed budget.

But in an era when other states are slashing mental health programs to balance budgets, holding still does not look like a bad idea, state officials say.

Other states are all getting cut, so if we can maintain a status quo, it doesn't sound so bad," said Zina Magee of Pocatello, president of the Idaho Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

"Except, Idaho is growing so we're going to need more services," Andrus recommended maintaining his 15 percent budget increase last year to avoid a shortfall. His mental health budgets average close to 6 percent increases. With luck, that will be enough to maintain current programs, administrators say.

The budgets include State Hospital South at Blackfoot, $10.8 million, including $8.04 million from state taxes.

State Hospital North at Orofino $4.75 million, with $3.5 million in state funds; Community Mental Health Services $13.35 million, including $7.8 million in state taxes.

Burley

Most of the cities and counties in the area, with the exception of Burley and Cassia County, had agreed to help subsidize the service.

Mayor Frank Bauman said that Councilman Derlin Taylor voted "no" to the proposal, while Hamdy Britton, Kerley LaVern C. Jackson and John Christian supported it.

In other business, Bauman reported that he had not yet received a letter from the city of Rupert about an animal control agreement in which city officials would house Rupert's stray dogs temporarily.

City Clerk Bud Brinegar said the agreement was to take effect Feb. 1, with Rupert paying the city $5 for each animal it took in.

He said no animals from Rupert have been taken in yet.

Part of ore-pit wall cracks, collapses at Black Pine Mine

By N.S. Nakkavend
Times-News writer

BLACK PINE—A section of wall in one of the ore pits at the Black Pine Mine caved in Friday.

A crack was noticed early Friday morning at the top of the "B" Pit, "highwall" or back wall, about 100 to 150 feet high. About 9 a.m. the crack widened sending about 40,000 cubic yards of material into the pit, said Martin Davies, safety and employee relations supervisor with the Black Pine Mine.

In an open-pit mine such as Black Pine, the pit is created as the ore is removed. Material also is removed to create benches, making the walls more stable.

No one was injured in the incident. Workers were scheduled to work in the pit, which was barricaded as a precaution when the crack was noticed.

The small portion of the wall fell in, Davies said.

The crack was evidently created by the freeze-thaw cycle — water seeps into cracks in the rock and then freezes, widening the crack. The area has lots of snow, he said.

Such cracks are not uncommon, he said. That's why the wall is constructed in benches and the top is monitored to make sure that cracks appear, workers are prepared.

The incident didn't slow operations at the mine, Davies said. Through he had not heard about the incident as of Monday afternoon, Larry Rangali, minerals supervisor of the Sawtooth National Forest's Burley Ranger District, said the company manager did open about such incidents.

The mine, owned by Spokane-based Pegasus Gold Corp., sits on 31,500 acres of Forest Service land within the Burley District on the eastern face of Black Pine Mountain, about 60 miles southeast of Burley.

It can be seen to the west from Interstate 84.

The mine contains as much as 15.7 million tons of ore and is expected to yield about 50,000 ounces of gold per year for five years. A weak solution of sodium cyanide is used to extract the minute quantities of gold from huge quantities of ore.

The Black Pine deposits average .022 ounce of gold per ton of ore — that means it takes about 45 tons of ore to produce one ounce of gold.

Jennifer Stolpa holds her 5-month-old son, Claydon, as her husband, Jim, looks on as they arrive at an airport in Hayward, Calif., on their way home to nearby Castro Valley, Monday afternoon. The Stolpas were lost in the snow in northern Nevada for eight days before they were rescued.

Man sought in connection with shooting

BURLEY — A Rupert man is being sought in connection with a Sunday night shooting at a Burley bar that left a man injured.

Li Jim Higgins of the Cassia County Sheriff's Department said the circumstances under which Adrian Ramirez, 19, was shot are still being investigated. Ramirez told deputies that he went outside Las Palmas Bar in east Burley to watch a fight and a bullet hit his right leg.

The incident occurred at about 11:40 p.m.

Several shell cases were found at the bar by law enforcement officers, but Higgins said it is still being investigated who fired the guns.

Ramirez was in stable condition Monday at Cassia Memorial Hospital. According to law enforcement officers, the slug wasn't removed from Ramirez's leg because it would cause more damage.

The caliber of bullet which struck Ramirez hasn't been determined yet, but Higgins said it was not a .22.

Utility regulators deny revenue hike

IDAHO utility regulators have turned down a 12-cent-per-line monthly-revenue hike for Boise Telephone Co.

But the Idaho Public Utilities Commission approved the increase for seven independent phone companies.

The PUC allowed the increase to offset their payments to the state's Telephone Relay Service for people with hearing and speech impairments.

In December, the Idaho Telephone Association asked for the surcharge to match the companies' TRS rates.

Following the commission's invitation for comment on the request, Troy Potlatch and Century telephone companies withdrew their applications, saying the cost of implementing the surcharge would outweigh the benefits of the additional funds.

PUC staff reported seven companies would apply: Cambridge, Island, Rockland and Rural telephone companies; Deer State Utilities; Midvale Telephone Exchange; Silver Star Telecom.

Man reports stereo equipment stolen

BURLEY — Eleven hundred dollars' worth of stereo equipment was reported stolen from a car early Saturday morning.

Crescencio M. Martinez, 27, said speakers, a cassette player, a CD player and amplifier were taken from his 1978 Firebird when it was parked at his residence of 1427 Almo in Burley, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

Someone broke the rear seat in removing the equipment, the report said.

Craig, Crapo to speak at luncheon

BURLEY — U.S. Sen. Larry Craig and Congressman Mike Crapo will be the featured speakers during the Cassia County Republican Committee's annual Lincoln Day luncheon.

The luncheon will take place at noon Feb. 9 at Price's Cafe. The cost will be $10 per person.

For additional information, call 678-5310.

Cancer Society units to raise funds

BURLEY — Mini-Cassia units of the American Cancer Society are planning joint fund-raising events.

On Feb. 12, both units will be sponsoring "Singing Valentines." For a $15 donation to the Cancer Society, the singing telegram will be delivered to a designated recipient.

For more information, call Teresa Ramsey at 678-3028, Vicki Cole at 436-5238, Sherri Smith at 678-3224 or Lois Morton at 436-4286.

On March 6, the units will hold their annual dinner, dance and auction at the Rupert Elks. Admission is $8. Anyone interested in donating items for the auction should contact Sharon Ennis at 436-4604, Colleen Temple at 436-6438 or Jayne Runyon at 678-0918 or 678-1191.

Family heads home after ordeal

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A couple who spent eight days snowbound in remote northwestern Nevada, with their infant son returned to the San Francisco Bay area on Monday, grateful for their lives and thankful to be going home.

"Since starting out for Idaho five weeks ago today, we have had a life and death roller coaster ride," James Stolpa said in a news conference at Washoe Medical Center.

"We have had times of fear and times of great love. Some times have been like nightmares and some have been like a wonderful dream."

James and Jennifer Stolpa, of Paso Robles, Calif., lost about one-third of each of their feet to frostbite suffered during their wilderness ordeal.

The Stolpas, both 21, have been at the Reno hospital since Jan. 7, the day after their rescue. Their 5-month-old son, Claydon, has stayed with them but was discharged from the hospital shortly after the family arrived.

The couple's truck became stuck in deep snow in Nevada on Dec. 29 when they tried to take a shortcut on a trip from Reno, Calif., to Idaho.

Mrs. Stolpa huddled with their son in a makeshift cave while her husband walked about 60 miles through waist-deep snow for help. They were rescued Jan. 6.

The Stolpas underwent complicated operations in which doctors amputated part of their feet and reconstructed blood vessels, and muscles so they could walk again using special shoes but without prostheses.

Dr. Norman Young, an orthopedic surgeon who was on the three-doctor team that performed the operation, said the couple would begin vigorous physical therapy in about two weeks, but would not be allowed to attempt walking before April.

"We will not know for sure the success for another two months, perhaps longer," he said. "Infection is a potential problem we have to watch very carefully."

The couple appeared at the news conference in wheelchairs, with their legs held straight out in front of them. Their feet and ankles are immobilized in braces while they heal.

Young said they are scheduled to return to Reno once a week for three or four weeks so doctors can monitor their progress.

Meanwhile, they will stay with relatives on an outpatient basis.

"I can't wait to go to the mall," Mrs. Stolpa said.

The couple agreed on Monday that the most wrenching part of their ordeal was when they had to separate so James Stolpa could seek help.

"We didn't know if we were ever going to see each other again," he said.

Mrs. Stolpa said she was confident in her husband, but spent a lot of her time with the baby crying.

"I hoped Jim would have the strength to make it and if not, God would give it to him," she said.

Stolpa, who is an Army private first-class, said he assumed he would receive a medical discharge, but that had not been determined. Mrs. Stolpa said the couple had received movie and book offers, but had not accepted any.

"We are fascinated by the fact that we have achieved a certain celebrity status," she said. "However, we would gladly trade everything that has happened to have our bodies intact and to return to our lives of five weeks ago. That will not happen so we will get on with our lives the best we can."

Both agreed that their decision to skirt Interstate-80, which was closed by a snowstorm, and take a gravel road through the extreme northwestern tip of Nevada was foolhardy.

"It was really aupid," Mrs. Stolpa said, adding that her mother-in-law had urged them not to drive in the snow.

"Maybe it will teach other kids to listen to their mothers," she said.

Robbery suspects arraigned

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two Jerome men suspected of grabbing a woman's purse from her shoulder as she walked from a Twin Falls store appeared in 5th District Magistrate Court Monday.

Mikel E. Fraser, 23, is charged with robbery, and Robert A. Savelli, 18, is charged with aiding and abetting robbery, both felonies.

The men are charged with driving up to Flo McNurlin of Twin Falls in the Payless Drug parking lot on Addison Avenue and snatching her purse Sunday afternoon.

Officers spotted a car at the Magic Valley Mall that matched the description of the one used in the robbery, and found McNurlin's black purse inside.

McNurlin and two witnesses identified the brown Mazda RX-7 and Savelli and Fraser, according to a statement by Officer Andrew Johnston in the men's court files.

Three, similar robberies were reported nearly a week earlier, on Jan. 26, but no charges have been filed in connection with those incidents.

In those earlier robberies, victims told police that two young men in a car matching the description of the one used Sunday drove up to the victims and the passenger reached out and grabbed whatever the person was carrying.

In one case, a purse was stolen. In another, the robbers got away with a bag of groceries.

Fraser was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond, and Savelli was held in lieu of $3,000 bond Monday. Preliminary hearings for both men are set for Feb. 12.

Group sheds light on Statehouse goings-on

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new government watchdog group wants to keep Idaho taxpayers out of the dark.

Twin Falls businessman Kent Cramer said Monday that Idahoans for Responsible Representation will issue its first monthly "mushroom-growers" award to Boise later this month.

"Idaho citizens are tired of being treated like mushrooms," Cramer said. "We are no longer willing to be kept in the dark and fed garbage."

There will only come in the form of a state initiative or even a constitutional amendment, Cramer said.

The recent defeat of legislation that would have outlawed closed-door caucuses at the Idaho Legislature was the final straw that prompted Cramer and others to form the group, he said.

A bill sponsored by Sen. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, that would have opened party caucuses to the public was defeated Wednesday by the Senate State Affairs Committee.

The group will fight to open closed caucuses, enact a bill on the acceptance by legislators of gifts offered by lobbyists and that elected officials be required to abide by any laws they pass.

"Creeping socialism is something that can't be tolerated," said Cramer, who called himself a good Republican.

He is an accountant who owns an estate planning company, American Prepaid Legal Services, and a home health care business.

The first lawmaker to get the mushroom grower's award for keeping the public in the dark will be Senate President Pro Tem Jerry Twigg, R-Blackfoot, Cramer said.

Twigg could not be reached for comment Monday.
